It might be truthfully said that Mrs. Roosevelt looks better on horseback than anywhere else. "She certainly do sit a horse beautiful," and she seems not to be at all afraid. She usually wears a very short and extremely plain black cloth habit and a black "chimneypot" hat. The side saddle which Mrs. Roosevelt uses is plain and unornamented. She has never adopted the fad of riding astride, and has never permitted any of the girls to ride that way. The whole family is devoted to horseback riding.
